Introduction

This leaflet aims to inform agricultural workers with settled or pre-settled status of your rights in Scotland and what you can do if you think your rights are not being protected. It also sets out what you should do to keep yourself and others safe during COVID-19.

Your work is a vital contribution to Scotland's economy. Both at work and in your free time, it is very important that you follow all the COVID-19 guidance, in order to keep yourself and others safe. This is subject to change and you can find up to date information here: <https://www.gov.scot/coronavirus-covid-19/>

The information contained in this leaflet is provided as guidance only. It does not provide legal advice on the Agricultural Wages (Scotland) Order 2021 or on legal matters generally. For more information, see the Agricultural Wages Guide (also available in translation).

RSABI is a charitable organisation. If you have difficulties with money, accommodation, work, or anything else, phone RSABI's helpline for seasonal agricultural workers. Translators are available.

General Information

People with settled or pre-settled status largely have the same rights as EU nationals did when the UK was a member of the EU. You have the right to work for any employer in Scotland, at any time. You have the same workers' rights as a UK citizen. You have the right to leave your current job, and seek a different type of work, or work with a different employer, at any time.

Your employer must provide certain details of the terms and conditions of the work you will carry out in writing before your first day of work. This should at least include:

- who is employing you;
- your rate of pay;
- your working hours and holiday days;
- the location of your work.

You should receive a pay slip on or before the day you are paid which shows:

- your pay, before and after deductions (such as deductions for your housing and travel if they were agreed with you in advance);
- tax and national insurance deductions required to be made by law;
- hours you worked; and
- the 'net' amount on your pay slip (after deductions) must be the same as the pay you actually receive.

The only benefit provided by an employer which can be counted as part payment of the minimum wage for an agricultural worker is the provision of a house without charge. The value of this benefit will be £1 per week. See the Agricultural Wages Guide: <https://www.gov.scot/publications/agricultural-wages-scotland-twenty-fifth-edition-guide-workers-employers/>

Timesheets

Employers must provide you with a time sheet on which to record your working hours each day unless there is an automatic system in place to record these hours. You must complete these time sheets and give them to your employer. Your employer is required to keep them for 3 years. It's a good idea to keep copies yourself.

Pay

In Scotland, from 1st April 2021 all agricultural workers must be paid at least £8.91 per hour. This rate of pay remains the same for all ages above 16 and all types of workers - whether part-time, full-time, students or workers carrying out piece work. Workers who have certain qualifications can be entitled to additional sums. This is a minimum amount so employers may choose to pay you more than £8.91 per hour.

You must be paid for any hour which you are made to work in your contract. You must also be paid if you were available for work but your employer has, for any reason, prevented you from working.

Working Time Regulations

By law, you must not work more than an average of 48 hours per week including overtime unless you have chosen to do so voluntarily, and agreed to this in writing. You have the right to withdraw your agreement to working increased hours at any time, for any reason.

Generally, you have a right to at least 24 hours off per week and 11 hours rest between work days. A rest break of at least 20 minutes should be provided if you work more than 6 hours in the day. There are some exceptions to this, but even then you must be given an equivalent period of compensatory rest to make up for the time lost, or, where, in exceptional cases, it is not possible to give you compensatory rest, you must be given appropriate protection to safeguard your health and safety.

Overtime

For the first 26 weeks you are employed, you have a right to be paid overtime if you work for more than 8 hours on any day or for more than 48 hours in any week. The minimum rate for overtime is £13.37 per hour from 1st April 2021.

If you have been employed continuously for more than 26 weeks, you have a right to be paid overtime if you work for more than 8 hours on any day or for more than 39 hours in any week.

Holidays

Your holiday entitlement depends on the number of days that you are expected to work in a regular working week (see table below). Where the number of days worked varies from week to week, the average number of days worked per week over a 12-week period should be calculated. It is important that you document your hours.

Days worked per week	Holiday entitlement (based on a 6-month contract)
1 day	4 days
2 days	6.5 days
3 days	9 days
4 days	11.5 days
5 days	14 days
6 days	16.5 days
7 days	19 days

At the end of your employment, you must be paid for any holidays not taken. Further information is contained in the Agricultural Wages Guide.

Sick pay

Employers must pay Statutory Sick Pay (SSP) to workers when:

- you've been off sick for at least 4 days in a row (unless it's self-isolation for Coronavirus – see below), including nonworking days;
- you earn on average at least £120 a week, before tax; and
- you've told your employer you are sick within any deadline the employer has set, or within 7 days.

From April 2021, SSP is £96.35 a week and can be paid for up to 28 weeks. SSP must be paid from the fourth day of sickness.

To qualify for any Agricultural Sick Pay (ASP), which is more generous than SSP, you must have been in continuous employment with the same employer for at least 52 weeks so most seasonal workers will not be eligible. More information is available on ASP in the Agricultural Wages Guide.

Coronavirus Sick Pay

As of 13 March 2020, workers must receive Statutory Sick Pay (SSP) from your first day of self-isolation if it's because:

- you have coronavirus (COVID-19);
- you have coronavirus symptoms, for example a high temperature or new continuous cough;
- someone in your 'household' has coronavirus symptoms;
- you've been told to 'shield' by the NHS because of an underlying health condition;
- you've been told to self-isolate by a doctor or NHS 111; or
- you've been told to self-isolate by the Scottish Government 'test and protect service', because you've been in close contact with someone who tested positive.

Workers can 'self-certify' for the first 7 days off work. This means you must notify your employer and follow your workplace process but you do not have to get a note from a doctor or NHS 111.

If you have to self-isolate due to coronavirus for more than 7 days, you can get an online self-isolation note from the NHS website:

<https://111.nhs.uk/isolation-note/>

Bereavement

If a member of your close family dies (for example, your child, parent, spouse or someone you lived with as if married), then you are entitled to at least 3 days paid bereavement leave.

Trade Union Membership

Trade unions protect workers' rights and provide support and legal services. You have the legal right to join a trade union and it is against the law for your employer to prevent you from joining a trade union. Unite the Union represents workers in the farming sector, if they are union members. Other unions are available.

<https://www.gov.uk/join-trade-union>

Accommodation

From 1st April 2021, any deductions from your wage for accommodation (other than a house) must not be more than £8.36 for each day in the week for which living accommodation is provided. See the Agricultural Wages Guide.

If your employer provides you with accommodation:

- you should have your own bed, with mattress. You should be told in advance if you need to provide your own bedding;
- curtains or blinds should be provided for windows;
- toilets, sinks and showers should be easy to clean and kept in working condition;
- electrical equipment must be safe and maintained;
- gas safety checks must be carried out annually and displayed for those living in accommodation;
- single sex sleeping must be provided except in family accommodation;
- external doors should be lockable;
- fire exits should be clearly marked in accommodation;
- you should have ventilation – opening windows, vents, or air conditioning;
- accommodation must be wind and watertight; and

- an affordable form of heating should be provided in bedrooms that heats the room to at least 18 °C.

Transportation

If your employer provides you with transportation to and from work:

- vehicles must be safe and inspected for safety on a daily basis; and
- all drivers must be properly trained and have a license to drive the vehicle if driving on a road.

Health and Safety

There are laws in Scotland to protect your health and safety whilst you are working:

- before you start work, your employer should give you guidance on health and safety and tell you what to do in an emergency;
- you should be given the name of an individual at work who you can speak with if you have concerns about health and safety provisions on site;
- you should be told about how to access to first aid equipment and who the appointed 'first aiders' are on the work site;
- you should have easy access to clean drinking water, clearly marked as such;
- your health and safety training must be paid for by the employer and time spent training should be treated as an extension of time at work;
- you should be given weather protective clothing needed so you can do your job, such as raincoat and waterproof boots, warm leggings and gloves; and

- if your job requires you to be exposed to other health and safety risks, then your employer should provide protective equipment free of charge. This can include safety helmets, hard hats, gloves, eye protection, high visibility clothing, safety footwear and safety harnesses.

If you have concerns about the health and safety conditions at your work, or about workplace injuries, you should contact the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). See 'Contact Numbers' at the end of this leaflet.

Coronavirus (COVID-19)

Please be aware that current guidance relating to coronavirus (COVID-19) is subject to change. Stay updated on the latest guidance here: <https://www.gov.scot/coronavirus-covid-19/>

Entering the UK

From Monday 15th February all residents and visitors entering the UK are subject to new measures due to coronavirus (COVID-19).

Seasonal agricultural workers who have a job offer working in fruit and vegetable farming on a named farm, do not need to book a managed isolation package or stay in a quarantine hotel on arrival unless arriving from a country on the acute risk list (<https://www.gov.scot/publications/coronavirus-covid-19-international-travel-quarantine/pages/exemptions/>). You should show a letter from your employer when you arrive at the UK border confirming that you will be employed as a seasonal agricultural worker. The letter should include:

- your name;
- your date of birth;
- your employer in the UK;

- your start date;
- the address of the farm where you'll be living;
- contact details of your employer and/or farm; and
- that you have settled or pre-settled status.

Other measures:

- You need to take a coronavirus test before you travel to Scotland. You cannot travel if the test is positive.
- You need to complete the passenger locator form. You can do this online in the 48 hours before you travel. Make sure you know the address of the farm where you will work.
- You must immediately go to the farm where you are working after arriving in Scotland.
- You can start work straight away but you must isolate on the farm for 10 days.
- Your employer will arrange coronavirus testing in the ten days after you arrive. You do not need to pay.

Please visit the Scottish Government website for details:

<https://www.gov.scot/publications/coronavirus-covid-19-public-health-checks-at-borders/pages/sectoral-exemptions/>

Reducing risks in the workplace

Your employer has received guidance on how to protect workers from COVID-19, including ways of changing the work environment to minimise risk. Your employer should:

- ensure 2 metres of physical distancing between workers wherever possible, and at all times in places where workers have breaks or eat food;

- use other measures, such as physical screening and minimising the numbers of workers in one area, to keep you safe where 2 metre distancing is not possible;
- ensure there is adequate ventilation (for example, all vents should be opened in polytunnels);
- ensure all equipment is cleaned and disinfected regularly; and
- identify and disinfect key touch points regularly, for example, door handles, hand-rails, keypads, and vending machines.

You should protect yourself and others from COVID-19. To do this you should:

- keep a physical distance of at least 2 metres from other people wherever possible;
- wash your hands regularly, for at least 20 seconds, with soap and water;
- cover your mouth and nose with a bent elbow or tissue when coughing or sneezing, and wash your hands afterwards;
- avoid touching your face;
- ensure that any surfaces you come into contact with are cleaned and disinfected regularly;
- wash your hands before and after using shared machinery;
- wear a face covering on public transport, in shops, and as instructed at work; and
- not share phones.

If you have concerns about protecting yourself and others from COVID-19, raise them with your employer.

Reducing risks in accommodation

When you first arrive on farm, your employer should make arrangements for you to quarantine for 10 days, except for the time you are at work. You can quarantine alone or in accommodation with workers who arrived at the same time. You should not mix with workers already on the farm.

Workplace housing units, for example, caravans, are treated as “households”. You cannot live or stay in more than one household. If one person in your household becomes ill with COVID-19 symptoms or needs to self-isolate, everyone in that household must self-isolate. How to self-isolate:

<https://www.gov.scot/publications/coronavirus-covid-19-test-and-protect/pages/how-to-self-isolate-effectively/>

After the first 10 days, you should follow current government advice for your local area on mixing with other households:

<https://www.gov.scot/publications/coronavirus-covid-19-protection-levels/>

Reducing risks in transport

Your employer should:

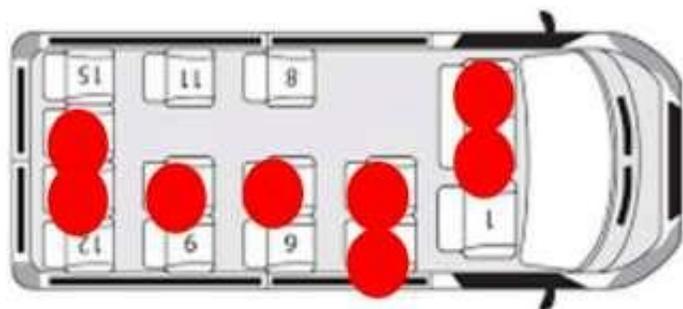

- check your health status before you go to work each day;
- help you get back to your accommodation quickly if you are ill on the way to work or on site;
- ensure workers are spaced out in any vehicle that is used to transfer you to and from work;
- ensure vehicles are well-ventilated whilst in use, either with fresh air from opening windows or air-conditioning; and
- clean vehicles after each trip, for example, by disinfecting handles and key touch points.

You should:

- spread out as much as possible in work vehicles;

- follow the stay at home guidance on NHS inform (see link below);
- not touch your face, and wash your hands for at least 20 seconds immediately before and after the journey- use hand sanitiser if that is not possible; and
- use a face covering when travelling with others in enclosed vehicles.

Alternative methods of transport should be considered, (such as cycling, walking or public transport) where a 2 metre separation in a vehicle cannot be met.

Example of a bus with reduced numbers of passengers - the seats coloured red should be left empty

Discrimination

It is against the law in Scotland for an employer to discriminate against workers on the basis of age, sex, race, disability, marriage and civil partnership, sexual orientation, gender reassignment, pregnancy and maternity, and religion or belief.

It is against the law to offer less favourable pay and conditions to men and women for equal work or to offer less favourable pay and conditions to workers on the basis of their working pattern, for example, part-time or full-time or contract, fixed term or permanent, unless it can be objectively justified by your employer.

If you or someone you know is a victim of any of these forms of discrimination, you can contact the Equality Advisory and Support Service for more information and advice see 'Contact Numbers' at the end of this leaflet.

Healthcare

For up to date information on COVID-19 please see the NHS inform website: <https://www.nhsinform.scot/>

People with settled and pre-settled status in Scotland are entitled to register with a general practitioner to receive primary care without charge and to receive secondary care (hospital or specialist treatment) without charge on the same basis as UK nationals living in Scotland.

You may wish to have health insurance for costs not covered by NHS Scotland such as some eye care, dental care, or repatriation to your home country in the event of serious illness.

Further information is also available on the NHS Inform website: <https://www.nhsinform.scot/publications/healthcare-for-people-coming-to-scotland-to-work-factsheet>

Coronavirus (COVID-19) Healthcare

You must tell your employer if you are ill or have any symptoms of COVID-19. If you have symptoms you should apply for a free COVID-19 test. You can do this through your employer or by going to: <https://www.nhsinform.scot/campaigns/test-and-protect>

You should return to your accommodation immediately and stay at home for 7 days if you have any of the following symptoms:

- a high temperature – you feel hot to touch on your chest or back (37.8°C or more);
- a new, continuous cough – have a new cough that's lasted for an hour; have had 3 or more episodes of coughing in 24 hours; are coughing more than usual; or
- a change in sense of smell or taste (anosmia)

Use the information on NHS inform for advice on what to do next:

<https://www.nhsinform.scot/>

If your symptoms don't get better after 7 days, use NHS inform or call 111 (free to call) to find out what to do next. You have the right to ask for an interpreter in your language.

Get advice if:

- you're feeling gradually more unwell or more breathless
- you have difficulty breathing when you stand up or move around
- you feel very weak, achy or tired
- you're shaking or shivering
- you've lost your appetite
- you're unable to care for yourself – for example, tasks like washing and dressing or making food are too difficult
- you still feel unwell after 4 weeks – this may be long COVID

Go to Accident & Emergency immediately or call 999 if:

- you're so breathless that you're unable to say short sentences when resting
- your breathing has got suddenly worse

- you cough up blood
- you feel cold and sweaty, with pale or blotchy skin
- you have a rash that looks like small bruises or bleeding under the skin and does not fade when you roll a glass over it
- you collapse or faint
- you feel agitated, confused, or very drowsy
- you've stopped peeing or are peeing much less than usual

Diagnosis and treatment of COVID-19 in Scotland is free of charge for everyone. This means:

- testing for COVID-19 is free, even if the result is negative;
- treatment provided for COVID-19 is free;
- no immigration checks are required for overseas visitors that are known to be only undergoing testing or treatment for COVID-19; and
- National Health Service (NHS) Boards in Scotland never pass on patients' immigration details to the Home Office.

Staying in Scotland

You have the right to remain in Scotland when you have finished seasonal work. People with settled status can stay in the UK indefinitely. However, you will lose your settled status if you are absent from the UK for more than five years.

People with pre-settled status are granted five years' leave to remain and can stay until their leave to remain expires. People with pre-settled status can apply for settled status once they have lived continuously in the UK for five years. Absences from the UK, totalling more than six months in any 12-month period, will normally mean the continuous residence period has been broken.

For more information about staying in Scotland, contact the EU Citizens Support Service helpline at Citizens Advice Scotland on 0800 916 9847 (Monday to Friday, 09.00 to 17.00) - or you can find your local advice bureau at: <https://www.cas.org.uk/bureaux>

You can also contact Fife Migrants Forum on 01592 642927 (Monday to Friday, 09.30-15.30).

Accessing Housing and Benefits

If you are homeless or at risk of homelessness, and you have been working or job-seeking in Scotland, you have the right to apply to the local authority for homelessness accommodation in Scotland.

You may also have the right to apply for financial assistance. To be eligible for some forms of financial assistance, you must have worked in the UK for a minimum of three months, but some help is available even if you have worked for a shorter period of time.

Safety and Protection

You have an equal right to protection from physical harm, injury, assault and abuse as every other person in Scotland.

If you are a victim of a serious crime or abuse, or you fear you may be imminently harmed, you should call the police on 999 for immediate help and protection. For non-urgent reports to the police, call 101.

Human Trafficking and Exploitation

Human trafficking, slavery, servitude and forced or compulsory labour are crimes in the UK with serious punishment. If you are experiencing or have seen others experience these crimes you should call the police on 999 for immediate help and protection. Another source of information and guidance is the Modern Slavery Helpline (0800 0121 700). The following are signs of possible labour exploitation:

- deception or misleading information (oral or written) about the work and working conditions you would find;
- physical or sexual violence towards workers;
- intimidation or threats to workers and/or insulting behaviour to make them feel vulnerable;
- restriction of workers' movements;
- pressure or force to work excessive overtime;
- abusive working and/or living conditions;
- making people work to pay off a debt that is ever increasing so that it gets much higher than its original value;
- keeping back wages or making high wage reductions in order to make workers stay in a job; and
- employers or visa sponsors holding on to passports and identity documents.

If you think you're being trafficked you can either call the police on 999 if it's an emergency. For non-emergencies, call 101 or if you do not want to speak to the police you can call the Modern Slavery Helpline on 0800 0121 700 or fill out the Modern Slavery Helpline online form:

<https://www.modernslaveryhelpline.org/scotland>

If you're a victim of human trafficking, the police or Modern Slavery Helpline will talk to you about what has happened and refer you to a support provider who can provide safe accommodation for up to 90 days.
